ORCA Murder Mystery Supports Waves4K.I.D.S.

On Saturday evening, September 28, A Murder was Brewing in Ocean Ridge. One hundred guests participated in an interactive musical Murder Mystery put on by Get-A-Clue Productions from Wilmington. In the fashion of Agatha Christie, 5 people have been lured to the ORCA Brewery, otherwise known as the Plantation Club, by an unknown mastermind who had more than beer tasting in mind. The audience participated in the show. Amy Brozena surprised her husband Fran with a walk down the aisle with Austin, one of the actors. Peggy Burris, Mark Mayer, and Corinne Eisenstein received karate lessons from Sum Yung, another of the actors. Much to everyone's surprise, Mark is a martial arts instructor and had a few tricks of his own up his sleeve. The audience had a chance to participate in guessing who of the five actors was the murderer. One by one they were all killed off. Who was the actual murderer? Who was the mastermind of the evening? What did he have in mind?

The event was a fund raiser put on by Ocean Ridge Charities Association (ORCA) to benefit Waves4K.I.D.S. The mission of WAVES4K.I.D.S. is to assure that the health, educational, and social welfare needs of children under the care of the Department of Social Services, or other children in difficult situations in Brunswick County, will be met if public funds are not available. Children are provided resources and services, based on financial need. Thanks to the generosity of the attendees, over $2,000 will be donated to their cause.

Committee members for the evening were Corinne Eisenstein, Glenn Hess, and Mary Perno supported by a team that included Maggy Schlink, Barbara Ellenberger, Beth Naylor, Amy Kelly, Mike Lynch, Claudia Piccarelli, Peggy Burris, Ron Sorice, and Brenda Hess.

Sincerest thanks to all who participated, volunteered, and attended the event. You all made it a wonderful evening.
